

I would like to state that not keeping the competition open for the Internet use and the ISP would be a great mistake. If you take the local ISP's out of the picture and let the phone companies and cable companies have complete control over the Internet service, individuals like myself and millions of other families will be charged outrageous prices and will have to discontinue the service. That will cause millions of children to loose the world of knowledge at their use and be forced to struggle to use public computers at the library's and schools who do not have enough computers to go around now. We need competition!!
